Perception Reframing

Question: What do these clients have in common?

1. Alice suffers from chronic shoulder pain. She tried supplements, chiropractic and other modalities. They gave slight relief, but not enough.
2. Sarah and Bill have relationship problems. They love each other, but several emotional triggers keep their relationship tense and edgy.
3. Steve is forty pounds overweight. He's tried several diet programs, exercises five days a week and is on a regular detox regimen. Yet he still can't lose weight.

Perception Reframing

What do these clients have in common?

Their deep-rooted emotional roadblocks keep them stuck in a pattern of physical and emotional disharmony.

Unresolved emotional roadblocks often contribute to physical symptoms and may cause people to repeat unwanted behaviors.

One of the fastest ways to blast through these roadblocks is Perception Reframing; changing the way we see things, things like events, circumstances, other people, and ourselves.

Perception reframing uses the energy of the voice to map perception and track changes. It's effective because you engage every aspect of your entire anatomy when you make voice, including your memories and beliefs.

When you speak of a specific topic (person, event, ability, etc) your voice will carry the perception you hold about the topic.

EVOX records and plots that voice energy into what is called a Perception Index. During an EVOX session you'll see the Perception Index shift, indicating a reframe of the perception.

Perception reframing is used to improve any area of human performance and is often life changing.

EVOX can be helpful when dealing with issues like:

- Repeated, negative behavior
- Weight problems
- Addictions
- Work or athletic performance
- Post traumatic stress
- Relationship problems
- Chronic pain

Better Outcomes... Faster Results

Perception of any topic will be reflected in its specific perception index, a voice pattern comprised of multiple frequencies.

When your client has a health issue, can't break a habit, or an emotional challenge, their perception will be reflected in their voice.

How EVOX facilitates lasting changes:

1. EVOX records a 10-second slice of your client's voice and displays it onto your computer as a Perception Index.
2. Using a stimulus-response exchange called a biosurvey, EVOX selects the appropriate missing frequencies.
3. EVOX plays these missing frequencies back to your client as electromagnetic signatures, not as audible signals.
4. Within minutes your client's voice shifts as a reflection of the shift (reframe) in perception. They're able to see things in a new way, allowing them to leave behind subconscious roadblocks and negative emotional baggage.
